Skip Content With its origins that goes back to the 1870s Wales, this Old Man is a rather robust nursery rhythm. What is believed to be the original version was not published until 1937, though, and a common version for most of us was published in 1906. The most common version of running: This old man, he played one, He played knick-knick on my thumb; With a knick-knick paddywhack, this old man came rolling home. This old man, he played two, He played knick-knick on my shoes; With a knick-knick paddywhack, this old man came rolling home. This old man, he played three, He played knick-knick on my knees... Dll. This old man, he played four, He played knick-knick in my door... Dll. This old man, he played five, He played knick-knick on my nest... Dll. This old man, he played six, He played knick-knick on my stick... Dll. This old man, he played seven, He played knick-knick up in Heaven... Dll. This old man, he played eight, He played knick-knick at my gate... Dll. This old man, he played nine, He played knick-knick on my spine... Dll. This old man, he played ten, He played knick-knick again... Dll. Most modern versions replace patty whack for Paddywhack, a more politically correct term given that Padi can be interpreted as a derogatory term that often translates as brawny Irishman. Some historians have also suggested that a more modern version has been prompted by a known per secondary who will offer to play paddywhack with younger passengers in a particular colonial city. The song is distributed as a way for cities to let elderly people know them to him, and to warn children from him. An earlier version was discovered and published by Anne Gilchrist, who said she learned from her Welsh nanny. With the same language, the lyrics are clearly ahead of the older male version, and are suitably innocent as children's songs. My name is Jack Jintle, eldest son but one, And I can play nick-nack on my own thumb. With my nick-nack and pad-lock and fine singing songs, and all the subtle women came dancing together. In 1908, a 74-year-old woman in a London work house was assembled singing a song called The Farmyard: Ride me in my fa-ther field May day morn-ing ears; Feed-ing me my Cow On The May day morn-ing ears, With the moo moo here and moo moo there, Here moo, there's a moo, Here's a pret-ty moo. The song can continue as long as the singer has patience and can think of new animals to add to the repertoire. The song stems from Sam Patterson Trio, who released the song under the label Edison in 1925. Copyright and © Meredith Corporation 2011. From Fifth Harmony to One Direction, both boy and girl groups didn't really splash on. That's unless you're talking about Little Mix. The British girl group won the UK X-Factor in 2011 and was the first girl group to ever do so on the British version of the show. They've made bangers ever since, but not as big in America anymore. To really convince why Little Mix should be a hit, here are seven videos to show. It's also a good introduction to them if you've never heard of their music before. 1. Wasabi Like many songs nowadays, Wasabi saw some popularity on Tik Tok last summer, but that's not why this song needs to be on your radar. It's like a bop, with some stages for songs. It has rhythmic verses, staccato and then more fluid, sensual chorus. It's a great song to work out, dance, or a great hype song. As one of the top comments said, Every time I hear Little Mix I become the queen of strange confidence, then the song is over and I come back to being a bit potato.)

2. Black Magic One of Little Mix's first hits, and song in general, Black Magic tells a fantastical story of wanting to use a love position on a man to get them finally seeing you. Although of course, just fantasy, the music videos are so worth it. All four members play these sort of nerdy or awkward girls who have massive ruin on this guy. Their books are magical and start boyaging mean girls and helping other less popular children in their school. It's fun and really marks their massive start.
3. Love Me Like You A retro-inspired song, Love Me Like You will remind you of the 1950s sockhop jam. It's slower and perfectly highlights their voices. It also has a great '50s concept getting longer and pining for a guy who seems to be one of a kind. However A 2015 video shows that maybe some people are too good to be good. No matter how you take its meaning, it's a fun song that will put you in a happy and bright mood.
4. Think About Us ft. Ty Dolla $ign Think About Us is basically about when you're so someone that when you think about them (which much) you can't help but wonder or hope they do the same. Whether at the beginning of a relationship or near the end, it's definitely a concern or thought someone might have. The song itself is also a really good vibe. A beat can be to dance or just a nice pulse of background when you need it.
5. Women Like Me ft. Nicki Minaj Little Mix always has a foundation or sometimes blatant message empowerment. Women Like Me, one of their new songs, basically says that they're strong, outspoken, and sometimes don't really behave like a proper woman ought to be. But they love a man and wonder, can they handle them? This also features Nicki Minaj and is a good song to make you feel strong.
6. Reggaetón Lento CNCO duet Originally, Reggaeton Lento is really in Spanish since it was a single by The Latin American boy group CNCO. Little Mix jumped on the remix, and it was a good song. It's definitely a different style of music that they usually do, however they perform it perfectly. There is still a part in Spanish, and it's perfect for dancing.
7. Spelling To My Ex Okay, time to overcome it with one of Little Mix's best and biggest songs. It's the ultimate split song. It doesn't trust the former, every se, but rather it elevates the girls. They thank them for making them the ones they are now, teaching them a lesson, and even being beyond their lives now. Honestly, it was like Thank you U, Next, but obviously the year before. It is also well known about Zayn Malick, allegedly, who broke up with Little Mix member Perrie Edwards via text message. It's the perfect song to scream the lyrics out, even if you don't have a container.
